Victorine Sequences and Augustinian Reform in Twelfth-Century Paris, Second Edition

Margot E. Fassler

Winner of the 1994 Otto Kinkeldey Award from the American Musicological Society and Winner of the 1997 John Nicholas Brown Prize from the Medieval Academy of America

“Margot Fassler is an original, imaginative scholar, and the first edition of Gothic Song: Victorine Sequences and Augustinian Reform in Twelfth-Century Paris fulfilled our need for a historical account. A paperback edition will make this picture of twelfth-century European creativity available to students and a wider general audience.” —Richard L. Crocker, University of California, Berkeley

CHRISTIANITY'S QUIET SUCCESS

The Eusebius Gallicanus Sermon Collection and the Power of the Church in Late Antique Gaul

Lisa Kaaren Bailey

“The Eusebius Gallicanus collection of sermons . . . has received comparatively little scholarly attention, being comprehensively overshadowed by the sermons of Caesarius of Arles. Bailey’s monograph . . . aims to show why this collection is worthy of wider consideration and how it brings important new insights to our understanding of the process of Christianisation in late antique Gaul.”

DANTE AND THE BLESSED VIRGIN

Ralph McInerny

“Serving as both a uniquely focused companion to the Divine Comedy and a treatise on the enigmatic, central role of Mary in the poem, this offering by the late Ralph McInerny, a noted philosopher, allows the Catholic reader in particular to recognize Dante’s ‘devotion to the Blessed Virgin in warm continuity with his or her own beliefs and practices.’ . . . Viewing Mary as the moral and philosophical key that unlocks the deepest criticism, McInerny writes with clarity, rigor, and élan.” —Choice

SHAKESPEARE AND RELIGION

Early Modern and Postmodern Perspectives

Edited by Ken Jackson and Arthur F. Marotti

“Religion has assumed a surprising centrality in contemporary Shakespeare studies, generating an abundance of historical insights alongside a burgeoning interest in the spiritual possibilities of the plays for us today. This collection eschews either take on the field, preferring a more comprehensive view. It brings together nearly all the people one would most want to read on the topic, and the essays are notable for their lively seriousness. Here, the topic of Shakespeare and religion is a burning brand with which to illuminate the past and the present. A stimulating book!” —Ewan Fernie, The Shakespeare Institute, University of Birmingham

The Convent Philosophy of Port-Royal

John J. Conley, S.J.

“[The book] introduces readers to the extraordinarily rich, and radically understudied, field of early modern convent writing.

Additionally, it makes a compelling case for the expansion of the philosophical canon through the inclusion of religious works by women, a move that medievalists interested in women’s religious texts ought to consider emulating.” —The Medieval Review

THE CHURCH OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

Nicholas Afanasiev

Translated by Vitaly Permiakov

Edited with an introduction

by Michael Plekon

Foreword by Rowan Williams

“This is the first time that the classic work of Fr. Afanasiev, originally completed in 1950, has been published in English. Fr. Afanasiev joins a line of Orthodox theologians who attempt to understand the Church—that ‘subject which is not a subject,’ according to Fr. Schmemmann—beyond the standard, canonical, approach. His voice, in this edition’s English, sounds timely even now.” —The Journal of Ecclesiastical History 13. 978-0-268-02030-9 • $45.00 cl SALE $31.50 • 352 pp

PARTICIPATORY BIBLICAL EXEGESIS

A Theology of Biblical Interpretation

Matthew Levering

“[Participatory Biblical Exegesis] goes beyond the task of diagnosis and, by appealing to Aquinas, illustrates the way exegesis can be done, and indeed has been done, when unencumbered by the conventions of contemporary hermeneutics which have in large part been underwritten by a linear-historical view of reality.” —European Journal of Theology

SEEING THINGS THEIR WAY

Intellectual History and the Return of Religion
Edited by Alister Chapman,

John Coffey, and Brad S. Gregory

“This book seeks to bring together religious history and intellectual history in a fruitful dialogue. While the threat of reductionism is more evident in the history of religious ideas, the essays in this volume demonstrate the possibility in the religious realm of ‘seeing things their way.’ This book is an important contribution to the history of religious thought.” —Catholic Library World

“Taken together, the essays in this volume reveal, eloquently and persuasively, the unacceptably high cost of ignoring both theology and religious experience; they will help to ensure that future intellectual historians will be unable to sidestep religion, as too many of their predecessors have done.” —The Journal of Ecclesiastical History 17. 978-0-268-02298-3 • $38.00 pa SALE $24.00 • 280 pp

ANALOGIA ENTIS

On the Analogy of Being, Metaphysics, and the Act of Faith

Steven A. Long

“Long speaks for a classical tradition of Thomistic thought but does so with a keen eye on precisely the ways it can help contemporary reflection. His compelling and substantive argument for the value and truth of a set of classical metaphysical understandings—for the necessity of the analogy of proper proportionality in the thought of Thomas Aquinas—will have to be taken seriously by anyone working in analogy in Aquinas as well as by a wide range of scholars within both philosophy and theology.” —John F. THOMAS D. EISELE

BITTER KNOWLEDGE

Learning Socratic Lessons of Disillusion and Renewal

Thomas D. Eisele

“Thomas Eisele’s captivating book, Bitter Knowledge, raises the debate over the law school model of Socratic teaching to an unprecedented level of philosophical sophistication. . . . Eisele conducts a careful analysis of four key dialogues of Plato that together offer a vivid literary portrait of the character of Socrates and his philosophical method. The result is a work at once rich in philosophic insight and provocative in its investigation of the method of American law teaching and its relationship with Socrates, the philosopher.” —Journal of Legal Education 30. 978-0-268-02774-2 • $55.00 cl SALE $33.00 • 368 pp

“With Books Under Suspicion, Kathryn Kerby-Fulton has accomplished something remarkable. This far-reaching study does nothing less than shift the paradigms with which we think about such fundamental categories as heterodoxy, orthodoxy, theology, and revelation in relation to fourteenth- and fifteenth-century English religious cultures. . . . ## Literary Criticism

THE CLAIMS OF POVERTY

Literature, Culture, and Ideology in Late Medieval England

Kate Crassons

“Crassons’s debut text . . . is a lively and original survey of medieval accounts and understandings of poverty from the 1300s to the fifteenth century. Fascinatingly, the book is also contemporary in its emphasis. Crassons leaps into this theme, asserting from the outset that the ambiguity in both defining and judging poverty is as salient to medieval England as it is to the twentieth-first century.”

“This is a collection of essays that Lee Patterson has written over the past thirty years, and it is very welcome. Though he calls them ‘Essays on Medieval Culture,’ the theme is now, as it ever was, the relation of literature to history, not so much of literary texts to individual events in history, which is the character of the ‘old’ historicism, as the nature of literature as an embodiment, mediator, and exploration of the deeper political, social, and economic movements of history.” —Journal of English and Germanic Philology

“This magisterial volume . . . brings together significant new contributions to the debate by a number of major North American scholars of early Italian literature. It is the product of ‘lungo studio’ and ‘grande amore’—both the love (and hate) that made Petrarch probe Dante’s volume, despite his protestations to the contrary, and that drove the authors of the present tome.” —Italica

AN EARLY MODERN DIALOGUE WITH ISLAM

Antonio de Sosa’s Topography of Algiers (1612)

Edited with an Introduction by María Antonia Garcés

Translated by Diana de Armas Wilson

“Early modern historians are always pleased—indeed, excited—when they encounter firsthand descriptions and information regarding a particular society or country or, in this case, a prominent Mediterranean city: Algiers, a city that was literally a synthesis of Muslim, Jewish, and Christian inhabitants. Wilson (who did the translation) and Garcés (who did the introduction and detailed notes) have produced exactly that with Sosa’s Topography of Algiers (1612). . . . Sosa’s writings provide a fascinating, unmatched picture of one of the most important cities in the Mediterranean, and Wilson and Garcés have done a masterful job in making it available in English.” —Choice

DEATH AND CONVERSION IN THE ANDES

Lima and Cuzco, 1532–1670

Gabriela Ramos

Winner of the 2011 Howard F. Cline Memorial Prize from the Conference on Latin American History

“Gabriela Ramos makes a compelling case that death was at the center of the spiritual encounter between Andeans and Spaniards in colonial Peru. . . . Ramos’s work is based on a close reading of nearly five hundred wills written by indigenous residents of Lima and Cuzco . . . her deep research in previously underused sources offers abundant evidence of the importance of death in the encounter between Christians and indigenous people.” —Church History

EUROPEAN TRANSFORMATIONS

The Long Twelfth Century

Edited by Thomas F. X. Noble and John Van Engen

“In European Transformations: The Long Twelfth Century, Thomas F. X. Noble and John Van Engen have assembled an impressive array of distinguished medievalists to explore geographical regions and a variety of themes to expose the best current thinking about what was and what was not distinctive about the twelfth century. Their collective efforts will be much cited for the innovative and well-argued contributions in this volume.” —Paul Hyams, Cornell University

TEMPLARS AND HOSPITALLERS AS PROFESSED RELIGIOUS IN THE HOLY LAND

Jonathan Riley-Smith

“In Templars and Hospitallers Riley-Smith returns once again to the history of the two oldest and best-known medieval military orders, whose members combined the functions of monks and knights. Riley-Smith’s Templars and Hospitallers, although brief, is yet one more of his significant contributions to the history of the crusades and the medieval military orders. It is a book that no one interested in these topics can afford to ignore.” —The Catholic Historical Review

POPE INNOCENT III (1160/61–1216)

To Root Up and to Plant

John C. Moore

“Moore sets out to provide an insight into the reality of the pontificate as Innocent experienced it, and thus he is very good at evoking details of life in the papal court. Moore’s biography is wide-ranging, showing the preoccupations of the pope at all of the stages of his pontificate.” —English Historical Review

SAINT LOUIS

Jacques Le Goff

Translated by Gareth Evan Gollrad

“. . . a warm and largely admiring portrait of a king in whom power and goodness do indeed form two sides of the same coin. . . . Le Goff’s Louis is cheerful, ardent, devout, intelligent but unintellectual, skillful yet uncomplicated, a man in tune with his age but able to transcend at least some of its limitations. . . . [T]his is a rich and generous book, crammed with a lifetime’s learning.” —The New York Review of Books

Mary and Fatima in Medieval Christianity and Shi'ite Islam

Mary F. Thurlkill

“This is an interesting book, covering historical, political, media, cultural, and feminist aspects of Mary and Fatima. It shows that image-making in the concrete and abstract senses has long been a tool of those seeking to influence and control others.” —Journal of Islamic Studies,
